It looks like Microsoft's power reaches deeply into the justice department! After years of watching Microsoft use their sheer size to destroy numerous companies, many of whom told their story during testimony, I find it unfathomable to accept the judgment as proposed!

By not punishing Microsoft, you are granting them free rein to carry on business as usual. I am sure they have targeted the companies that tried to stand up to them during the trial as their next victims.

Hopefully someone will rise above the Microsoft political contributions and allow justice to prevail. Or will it be left to the states to punish this behavior?

If we catch bin Laden, and he promises not to kill any more Americans, will you let him off too?
